New York, November 3.—Wall street presented a very saimsted appearance today, and excitement ran high. The streets in the vicinity of the exchanges were crowded with members of the various boards discussing politics, and at intervals cheers would be given for Blaine and then for Cieveland. Considerable money was wagered on the result.

Knowledge was obtained to-day by the authorities of this city to the effect that fifty men registered from a single house in West Twenty-eighthr street, in which not one of them resided. Detectives were this afternoon placed in possession of about a dozen bench warrants, some of which they expect to execute during the day. The indications are that a very large number of arrests will be made to-morrow.

In round numbers, the diverted Republican vote will be 125,000. It has been more specifically figured as exceeding that by about 11,000, but round numbers will serve our purposes for to-day. We believe 100,000 of the boiters will vote for Cleveland, while the remainder will vote for St. John or refrain from going to the polls at all. It looks bad for Blaine. I don't see how he is going to win in any of the Northern States which are essential to his success. The Republican revolt in Connectient is too large to give him any chance there. You will perhaps be aurprised when I tell you Illinois is much more likely to go Democratic than Republican. We have between 14,000 and 10,000 names on our roll from that State, and how the Republicans are going to overcome such a loss as that I simply cannot conceive. We have done very well in New Jersey, but not so well, perhaps, as elsewhere. Still, the responses received from that State are sufficient in number to place the result there substantially beyond doubt, especially when you remember the State is Democratic."

PALMER, Mass, November 3.—Blaine's reception at Springfield was a very fine one. Fully 20,000 persons were on the streets through which the procession passed and in the public speed with the stand was erected. Blaine was impoduced by Col. Metcalfe, of Springfield, and was loudly cheered. He congratulated the people upon so large and demonstrative manifestation of the Republican strength of Massachusetts. Being somewhat hoarse, Blaine excessed himself from speaking further and gave way, he said, to some one whose voice could reach the great crowd. There were calls for Go7. Robinson, but he did not respond. Senator Hale was introduced, and made a few remarks, saying if Blaine could not be widely heard to-day he could be telt. This was received with loud cheering. When Blaine and his party returned to the train they were joined by Senator Hoar and A. W. Beard, of Boston. At 1:40 o'clock the train reached Palmer, and was greeted by a salute from the steem whistles of several engines.

"I never more sincerely regretted the impairment of my voice than at this moment, that I might make a fitting response to the most cordial and most eloquent greeting which your distinguished chairman has given me. I crave the power of expression that I might say to him in the presence of a Worcester audience that his presentations of the people's cause in this campaign constitute the political literature of 1884. Over with. All that has been unpleasant in it, with all that has been unpleasant, with all that has been unimportant. It closes to day, and even though it may sound like the voice of egotism, I am proud to declare here in the heart of the commonwealth of Massachusetts that not once, in not as single instance, has any poisoned shaft reached me here (laying his hand over his beart), and I return to my home, not with a less, but with a greater appreciation of the grandeur, the nebility and the justice of the American people, to that people of which Massachusetts forms so distin-guished and so honorable a part. Gov. Robinson followed and spoke very briefly. As the train moved off there was another salute from the steam whistles and cheers from the crowd and a general rush of the people nearest the train to shake hands with Blaine.

At Natick there was a very large crowd, one section of which was composed of Butler men, who cheered repeatedly for their candidate. Blaine spoke briefly to the people nearest him, expressing regret that he could not utter with his full voice his thanks to the Republicans of Massachusetts for their generous and, as he hoped, victorious campaign. The verdict to be rendered to-morrow he awaited calmly and with a reasonable degree of confidence. [Cheers.]
